Introduction

What the book provides

This book is for Grade 12 students. It provides a wide range of topics and activities, broadens your general knowledge and develops your vocabulary. You'll enjoy reading the Factfiles and Quote boxes.

Your book is divided into 4 modules, each containing 3 units which develop the topic in different ways. It presents grammar in context and provides regular practice in the language skills.

There are also plenty of opportunities for you to develop critical thinking skills and express your own opinion. The Quote boxes provide interesting viewpoints for you to discuss, collect and add to.

Quote

"It is the spirit and not the form of law that keeps justice alive."

Earl Warren

In the project at the end of each module, you'll enjoy applying the various skills you acquired in a challenging real-life task, as well as working with your peers. At the end of the book, there is a Literature Time section.

You'll enjoy reading different forms of English literature and then checking your comprehension in the Workbook.

Reference material

At the back of your Student's Book, you'll find reference materials, including a Grammar File, Function File, Irregular Verbs List, Glossary and websites.

Grammar File: You can refer to it if you encounter difficulty or need extra examples, or it can be reviewed later - when preparing for a test, for example.

Function File: It lists the functions you encounter in every unit.

Irregular Verbs List: It lists irregular verbs in alphabetical order in their base, past simple and past participle forms.

Glossary: You can use it to increase awareness of vocabulary, develop vocabulary and practise dictionary work.

How each unit works

You need to remember that each lesson or activity can be carried out in different ways, whether in class or at home. You need to follow the teacher's instructions.

At the beginning of each module, there is a list of outcomes you are expected to demonstrate.

Outcomes may read as follows:

Outcomes

You will be able to:

- ▶ listen to a talk and a description
- ▶ recall an important event
- ▶ scan for specific information
- ▶ present ideas and suggestions
- ▶ write an essay

The outcomes are related to the language skills covered in the course: Reading, Listening, Grammar, Vocabulary, Speaking, Pronunciation and Writing.

Reading / Listening

You'll start each unit with an 'opener' or discussion, which encourages you to talk about the topic of that unit and helps in the listening or reading text which follows.

First, you'll have a short task to complete while you are listening or reading. Then you'll encounter a Check your understanding section which has more detailed comprehension questions. You are encouraged to listen or read several times to complete different tasks. After working on the text, you'll have the opportunity to develop critical thinking; you'll voice your own opinion and think about related issues.

In the Think and Speak sections, you can:

- recount personal experiences;
- speculate;
- discuss moral or cultural issues.

Speaking

Speaking practice enables you to gain the confidence to produce fluent and accurate speech. What is particularly helpful is the Useful Language box at the bottom of the Speaking and Writing pages.

USEFUL LANGUAGE

Talking about past events

(Then) one day, I ...

I was about to go into the garden to play football, when ...

Two months / Ten minutes / Three days later, we ...

The first thing that struck me was ...

That was six years ago.

You'll enjoy learning frequently-used English expressions.

Vocabulary

New words are highlighted in a grey box entitled Words to remember. You'll enjoy a wide range of vocabulary exercises, such as matching, gap-filling, categorising, listing and identifying pictures.

Grammar

Usually you'll be given example sentences or phrases from the reading or listening texts. Then you'll have a variety of practice exercises and a reference to the Grammar File for extra help.

Pronunciation

Your book includes regular pronunciation sections which provide practice and guidance in areas of difficulty.

Writing

You'll develop particular real-life writing skills such as writing e-mails, completing application forms, writing reports, letters and notes, and designing projects. You will also practise planning and checking, which are very important stages in writing.

Focus on

At the end of each module, there is a Focus on page. You'll enjoy reading a text about a Kuwaiti feature and discussing related matters with the whole class. After this, you'll have the opportunity to learn a linguistic point found in the text and apply it.

What the Workbook provides

The Workbook is closely linked with the Student's Book. You'll use it to practise the language skills covered in the Student's Book. The Workbook includes regular Progress Tests. There are also some exercises in every module of the Workbook for self-assessment. At the end of each module, you should fill in the Learning log in the Workbook and talk about what you find useful, easy and / or difficult. You can revise what you find difficult by using the Grammar File, Function File, Irregular Verbs List and Glossary at the back of the Student's Book.

- c Hammurabi's code of law consisted of 272 laws. ☐
- d The police and judges make laws. ☐

Think and speak Discussing the law; expressing opinion

7 Read the text and discuss the questions below in pairs or groups.

A tolerant society

Just like in the rest of the world, Kuwaiti laws are made to protect the individual rights of the people living there. Kuwait has a well-structured and clearly-defined judiciary, composed of summary, military and religious courts, amongst others. The Emir, in consultation with the Justice Ministry, appoints judges in the regular courts. The law is drawn from the teachings of the Holy Qur'an and protects the rights of all people of all religious persuasions, ensuring a safe, just and tolerant society.

- a What is the main purpose of sending people to prison: to punish them, or to protect society?
- b How do Islamic values influence the system of laws in Kuwait?

Grammar

(violence)
- b There would be a situation in society if there were no system.
(chaos / law)
- c He left court a free man because he had proved that he was
The jury said he was not (innocence / guilt)

Reading Legal disputes

1 Read the following essay and discuss these questions.

- a What are the arguments for more court cases?
- b What are the arguments against?
- c What is meant by a 'culture of blame?'

The amount of litigation brought against everyday people has increased dramatically in recent years. A key example is the case of a man in Yorkshire who is suing his neighbour after falling on his pathway. He contends that his neighbour was responsible for maintaining the path. The neighbour claims that the man would have fallen regardless.

- 5 They are now locked in a bitter court case that looks set to drag-on for months and cost both men substantial amounts of money. -----

- The main argument against such cases is that they are a reflection of an emerging 'culture of blame.' People search for someone to blame for accidents that, in the past, they would have simply taken responsibility for themselves. Indeed, ordinary people
- 10 suing each other has become so commonplace that countless firms of lawyers have sprung up specifically to deal with these cases. These petty grievances clog up the courts and prevent prosecutions against 'real' criminals. -----

- However, supporters of litigation argue that the increase in court cases actually shows our courts are working. As Mark Shields, spokesperson for a pro-litigation group,
- 15 states, 'The increase in legal cases reflects a growing desire in society to protect everyone from the effects of criminal neglect.' For them, the opportunity for people to hold others accountable for their own everyday grievances is a key feature of any good society. -----

- Ultimately, I believe we must take care to ensure that minor issues, which could
- 20 normally be resolved without the assistance of the courts, do not prevent our legal system from operating efficiently. For everyday grievances, the courts should be the very last resort, rather than the first port of call. -----

2 Read the essay again. Match each paragraph with one of these headings.

- a The views of the writer
- b The arguments for more litigation
- c The arguments against more litigation
- d Background information

Think and speak Making conclusions; agreeing and disagreeing

3 Discuss the following questions.

- a What conclusions does the writer reach? Do you agree?
- b Do you think people should solve minor issues in court? Why or why not? How else could people solve such disagreements?
- c Which, if either, do you think is more important: ensuring everyone has equal rights or prosecuting violent and dangerous criminals?

task

You are going to write an essay expressing your opinion.

Writing

- 1 The car in the photograph has been stopped for driving too fast in a residential area. Discuss these questions with a partner.

- a Should there be speed limits in areas like this? Why or why not?
- b What should happen to motorists who break these speed limits?

- 2 You are going to write an essay in answer to this question:

Should motorists who drive too fast in residential areas be banned from driving?

- a Decide what your opinions are on this subject. Is your answer 'Yes', 'No' or 'It depends'?
- b Plan your essay in four paragraphs, using the essay on the previous page as a model. Write notes under these headings:

- Paragraph 1 Background to the topic
- Paragraph 2 Arguments for
- Paragraph 3 Arguments against
- Paragraph 4 Your opinion

- 3 Write your essay in 200-220 words.

- a Use ideas you discussed in exercise 1 above. You may use expressions from the Useful Language box below.
- b Follow your paragraph plan and express your ideas clearly and simply. Make sure readers know what your opinion is.

Words to remember

claim, clog up, contend, grievance, in favour of, intend, litigation, petty, regardless, residential area, speed limit, sue, supporter, ultimately

Check

- 4 When you have finished writing, read your essay carefully.

- a Check spelling, grammar and punctuation.
- b Exchange essays with a partner. As you read, ask yourself these questions:
 - ▶ Has he / she answered the question fully?
 - ▶ Has he / she presented arguments for and against?
 - ▶ Has he / she expressed his / her own opinions clearly?
- c Return your partner's essay and exchange thoughts and ideas.

Unit 2 Migration

Grammar

Past perfect simple (after, before, by the time)

Residents of San Francisco left after the earthquake and fire of 1906.

Thousands of Irish left for America in the 19th century to find a better life.

Many Europeans migrated to the Gulf after the oil boom.

Discuss

Look at the photographs and discuss these questions.

- a Read the title of the unit and look at the photos. What kind of issues do you think will be discussed in this unit?
- b Why do large numbers of people leave their homes and go to live in a foreign country? Three different reasons are illustrated in the photos.
- c What other migrations like the ones shown in the photos do you know about?

Read

Before you read the article on page 16, match the words a–g with their meanings.

- | | | |
|---------------|-------|---|
| a boom | ----- | 1 great hunger |
| b development | ----- | 2 economic activity concerned with production materials |
| c deteriorate | ----- | 3 serious shortage of food leading to great hunger |
| d emigrate | ----- | 4 a period of great wealth |
| e famine | ----- | 5 the process of modernisation |
| f industry | ----- | 6 leave your country to live in a foreign country |
| g starvation | ----- | 7 get worse |

Read the article very quickly and match these headings with the correct parts.

- Economic boom -----
- Economic necessity -----
- Conflict -----

Why do people leave their home countries?

This article looks at three reasons why people emigrate and gives historical examples.

A _____

In the early 19th century, the most important industry in Ireland was agriculture. However, the farmers were poor and they used old-fashioned methods. Because they heard that they could earn four times as much in America, some farmers emigrated. Unfortunately, between 1820 and 1840, the economic situation in Ireland deteriorated, and in 1845 the Potato Famine began. Disease decimated 75% of the year's potatoes, the main food for most of the population. During the next two years, 350,000 people died of starvation, and there was a huge increase in emigration to America. By the end of 1854, a quarter of the population of Ireland had left for the United States.

B _____

The economic boom of the 1960s and 1970s helped transform Kuwait into a modern and wealthy state, funded by oil and other natural resources. The boom in the oil and construction industries necessitated a huge influx of skilled workers. By 1972, thousands of them moved to the region to work in high-tech cities such as Kuwait City. These workers, from countries such as the United Kingdom and Sweden, had come to seek a better life and help with the development of Kuwait. Kuwait affords them an opportunity for work and a standard of living that they would be hard-pressed to find anywhere else in the world.

C _____

Between 1936 and 1939 there was a terrible civil war in Spain. The armies used bombs and other modern weapons, and this meant that thousands of civilians were killed and injured and many homes and villages were destroyed. Because of this, many thousands of ordinary Spanish people who were not involved in the war decided to leave their country. Most of these refugees crossed the border into France and settled there, but others moved more permanently to Britain or the United States.

Check your understanding

- 4 Complete the table below. You should include the nationalities of the people in the texts, where they migrated to and the reasons for their migration.

Words to remember

afford, boom, decimate, deteriorate, emigrate, famine, foreign, hard-pressed, high-tech, necessitate, seek, unfortunately

Text	Nationality	Place they migrated to	Reasons for migration

- 5 What do the words and phrases in italics in these extracts from the article refer to?

- a The farmers were poor and they used old-fashioned methods ...
- b Because they heard that they could earn four times as much in America ...
- c ... thousands of them moved to the region ...
- d These workers, from countries such as the United Kingdom...

Think and speak Expressing opinion

- 6 Discuss these questions with other students.

- a How do you imagine Irish people felt when they left home for their new life in America?
- b How has Kuwait provided a good home for skilled workers?
- c What are the advantages and disadvantages of migration?

Grammar

• Past perfect simple (after, before, by the time) Grammar reference pages 63-64

Pronunciation Using stress for emphasis

- 4 (2.1) We often stress particular words in sentences to give them emphasis or to correct what someone else has said. Listen to the conversations between speaker A and speaker B then write the words that are stressed in B's replies.

- a No, they're from Ireland.
- b No, they live in America.
- c No, but I've visited Ireland.
- d No, it started in 1936.

- 5 (2.1) Listen to the conversations again and repeat B's replies. Make sure you stress the correct word.

Speaking Talking about important events in your life

1 You are going to hear someone talking about emigrating from England to Australia. Look at the photographs of the place the speaker left and the place she moved to. Discuss these questions with a partner.

- a How do you think the speaker felt when she heard that her family was moving to Australia?
- b How different do you think she found life in Australia?
- c How has emigrating changed her life?

Listen

2 (2.2) Listen and check the ideas you discussed with your partner in exercise 1.

3 (2.2) Listen again. Fill in the table below with information about the speaker and her move abroad. Then, check your answers with your partner.

Age she left England
Where she moved to and why
Length of intended stay/actual stay
Occupation

4 Look at the incomplete mini-dialogue below. Complete it with a partner.

- A What do you think are the advantages of moving abroad?
- B Well, I think What about you?
- A I believe
- B Do you think there are no disadvantages?
- A Oh, yes. There are
- B OK. I agree / disagree

task

Writing An e-mail

You are going to write an e-mail to a friend describing a life-changing event.

1 You are going to talk about an event which changed your life in some way.

- a Choose the event you are going to talk about. It could be a major change, like the speaker's move to Australia, or a more minor event. Examples:
- ▶ Your first day at school
 - ▶ Your first holiday
 - ▶ Changing schools
 - ▶ An interesting journey
- b Make a few notes in answer to these questions.
- 1 Who was involved?
 - 2 Where were you?
 - 3 How did you feel?
 - 4 What happened?

2 Now work in pairs.

- a Take turns to tell your story, referring to your notes and using some of the phrases in the Useful Language box below.
- b Ask each other questions to find out more information.

3 You are going to write an e-mail to a friend and tell them about the event you talked about in exercise 2.

- a Using your notes from exercise 1, write a rough paragraph plan for your e-mail. You should aim to write around 200-220 words.
- b Briefly describe the event, before telling your friend how you felt about it at the time and how you feel about it now.
- c Use vocabulary both from the unit and from the glossary at the end of this book. Make sure that your friend knows how you feel about what happened. Use the Useful Language box below to help you describe the event.
- Don't forget that e-mails are usually written informally.

Check

4 When you have finished writing, check your e-mail carefully.

- a Check spelling, grammar and punctuation.
- b Exchange e-mails with the person sitting next to you and make suggestions and comments to them.

Unit 3 Human Values

Grammar

Adverbs of manner; If conditionals type 0, type 1, type 2 and type 3

Discuss

- 1 a Look at the pictures. What do you think is happening?
- b What do you understand by the term human values? How important are human values?
- c How do governments protect basic human rights? Give examples.
- d Which human values are especially important in Islam?

Read

- 2 Before reading, think of as many human values and human rights as you can. Use the title of the unit, the pictures illustrated, and the title and headings in the reading text to provide ideas. Record your ideas on a word map, like the one shown below.

- 3 As you read the text on the opposite page think of an answer to this question. What do you think is the merit of identifying universal human values?

Our Shared Humanity

Despite the apparent diversity of cultures throughout the world, some ethnographers and anthropologists have set out to establish a set of universal human values. They believe that almost all cultures, from the simplest to the most complex, share several basic traits and values. Here is a brief overview of some of their findings.

Compassion

- 5 The first value they identified was compassion and empathy. Caring for those worse off than ourselves, or those incapable of looking after themselves, such as the hungry, poor, elderly or very young, is a human attribute we can find in almost every society. The ways in which this behaviour is expressed range from looking after the sick to donating a portion of one's earnings to charitable causes.

Freedom

- 10 Human freedom is another value that most societies seem to value. However, freedom is not as straightforward as its name may imply. Freedom does not mean simply acting as one wishes all the time; in fact, such an action is the opposite of freedom. Most cultures perceive freedom as a balance between individual freedoms and the needs of society as a whole. Society gives us many forms of protection that we wouldn't otherwise have.

Tolerance

- 15 Tolerance, or the acceptance of people different from ourselves, is another important human value. Many countries have important legislation in place to protect minorities from abuse and discrimination. This is simply the inevitable evolution of basic human impulses translated into laws.

Check your understanding

4 Find sentences that mean the same, or imply the same, as the sentences given below.

- a Liberty is a more complex idea than it may first appear.
- b Being protective of people who are in need of help is a widespread human trait.
- c Individuals sacrifice some of their freedoms to gain the protection afforded to them by society.
- d Some specialists maintain that all cultures share a set of common values.

Words to remember
 abuse, anthropologist, apparent, attribute, charitable, compassion, discrimination, diversity, empathy, ethnographer, impulse, incapable, inevitable, legislation, liberty, minority, overview, tolerance, universal, value

Think and speak Giving opinions; agreeing and disagreeing

- 5 a Do you agree that the values mentioned in the article are universal ones? Why or why not?
- b In what ways does Islam teach us important human values? Give examples.
- c In your opinion, are these statements True (T) or False (F)? Justify your answers.

- 1 Cultures share several basic traits and values. ☐

- 2 Freedom means doing whatever you want to do. ☐

- 3 All countries lack legislation to protect minorities. ☐

Grammar

• Adverbs of manner Grammar reference page 63

1 Change the incorrect adjectives into appropriate adverbs of manner so that the sentences make sense.

- a The child was behaving very bad.
- b The dog was barking aggressive at the children playing noisy.
- c His car drove smooth after the mechanic fixed his engine.
- d You can't talk loud in the library. That would be behaving unacceptable.

2 Rewrite these sentences by replacing the bold parts with an appropriate adverb of manner. You will need to change nouns to adjectives.

People in need should be treated with compassion.

People in need should be treated compassionately.

- a 'Don't run so fast,' the teacher shouted with anger.
- b New born babies should be held with care.

Speaking A humanitarian appeal

Listen

(3.1) Listen to a radio advert for a charity. As you listen to the advert, answer the following questions.

- a The purpose of the advert is to ...
 - 1 give information about struggling people worldwide.
 - 2 highlight the work the charity is doing.
 - 3 raise money for a humanitarian appeal.
- b The speaker uses extreme contrasts to ...
 - 1 highlight the small sacrifices donations would involve.
 - 2 complain about how expensive the modern world has become.
 - 3 provide information on fundraising events.

Prepare to present your own radio broadcast asking for donations to a charitable appeal. The charitable appeal can be real or fictitious. Think about the following:

- ▶ What the appeal is concerned with (hunger, disease, poverty, disaster victims)
- ▶ The name of the appeal
- ▶ What you are asking people to do (send money, donate clothing, organise events)

Planning

Write a brief plan of what you are going to say in note form. Make sure to use some of the devices and techniques you identified in exercise 1.

Speak

Perform your radio broadcast to your partner and then let them perform to you. As they read their radio broadcast, ask yourself the following questions.

- a Is their advert's message effective? Does it create interest in the appeal?
- b Does it give necessary information about how you can help?
- c Is there anything missing in the advert?

Writing A newsletter

- 1 This is a newsletter for an English charity organisation. Charities use such letters to keep their members up-to-date with projects and events.

Read the newsletter and match the paragraphs with the correct headings. There are more headings than you need.

Dear Mr Abdulhameed,

A _____
Thanks to the incredible response to our Campaign for Clean Water we've now successfully provided clean water to over 500 villages and towns, supplying over 15,000 people with safe drinking water. This campaign saw the construction of wells and pumps, combined with an educational programme about the importance of making water safe for consumption.

B _____
Our Fair Treatment projects have come along in leaps and bounds this quarter. An unprecedented contribution from the public helped us raise over £5 million for the construction of state-of-the-art hospitals in underprivileged areas worldwide. Construction has already begun on four sites, through which the health care of entire regions will be revolutionised.

C _____
The Halt Hunger campaign continued to make gains this year, with an increase in donations following an extensive television appeal. This has allowed us to distribute food and aid to over 3 million people in the most dire conditions. The distribution of food alleviates many problems other than simple hunger. Halting hunger allows the poor to provide for their families, defends bodies against illness and puts a smile on children's faces.

D _____
Whilst the progress made this quarter has been encouraging, there is still a huge amount of work to be done. Every five seconds a child dies from lack of nutrition. More than one in eight people have no access to clean water. Over 1/6 of the world's population struggle simply to exist. We simply cannot stress enough the need for your continued support and contributions.
Thank you for taking the time to read our newsletter. We really do appreciate the commitment you make to our projects. Without your support we would be unable to positively affect the lives of so many. Together, we can make this world a fairer place.
Thank you again.

- 2 Discuss the letter in small groups. What techniques does the writer use? What are the benefits of producing a charity newsletter for members?
- 3 Now, in small groups, plan and write a newsletter to be sent to people who donated to your radio advert. You can combine each other's adverts under one charity. Take the following points into account:
- ▶ The newsletter should mention successes your charity has made.
 - ▶ It should be linked to your radio advert but should not repeat all the information.

The Foreign Diplomatic Institute

Kuwait has always been a country keen to promote its diplomatic ties and relationships with other far-flung places. The Kuwait Foreign Diplomatic Institute is just the latest in a long line of moves made by the Kuwaiti government to extend the hand of friendship to other countries.

- 5 Officially opened by His Highness Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmed Al-Jaber Al-Sabah in December of 2008, the Foreign Diplomatic Institute will prepare and train future Kuwait diplomats for deployment throughout the globe.

The centre is to be run by Ambassador Abdulaziz Al-Sharikh. Ambassador Al-Sharikh is a successful diplomat who has worked in Australia, Brussels, Germany and Japan. With his guidance and experience

- 10 Kuwait can be sure of having a generation of well-trained, competent and enthusiastic diplomats representing them throughout the globe.

The Foreign Diplomatic Institute has three main aims. Firstly, the institute is a training institute. Its objective is such that the staff of the institute will be responsible for training all of Kuwait's diplomatic staff, both old and new. Newer recruits will obtain the entirety of their training from the institute,

- 15 receiving twelve months of training whilst in Kuwait, and a further six months whilst on foreign soil. Old staff, on the other hand, will use the institute to update and reinforce their knowledge and skills, through refresher courses and access to a myriad of professional training programmes.

Secondly, the institute will function as a government think-tank, conducting research on foreign policy that may ultimately influence many important decisions taken by the government. Whilst the research

- 20 undertaken will mainly be used by officials and dignitaries there is also the hope that some of the work undertaken may be published.

The third and final aim of the institute is the organisation of international seminars, conferences, workshops and meetings with relevance to Kuwaiti foreign policy. Speakers from other countries will also be invited to give talks. For example, the American Ambassador gave a talk in which she discussed

- 25 the impact of America's presidential election upon its relations with Gulf countries.

Ambassador Al-Sharikh says one of the most important lessons the diplomats-in-training will learn is media relations. As he himself says, diplomats '...can never escape media... If they don't know how to deal with the media, they will have lots of problems.'

So, what kind of person does it take to become a successful diplomat? Currently, the institute has 46

- 30 trainees, all of whom are university graduates. Most of them studied in the Faculty of Law or the Faculty of Political Science at Kuwait University, but there are other disciplines represented, for example English Language. However, the main criteria for success as a diplomat are confidence, friendliness and, most importantly, willingness to work very, very hard.

Compound words

- 1 A compound word, such as well-trained, is formed when two words are joined, sometimes with a hyphen, to make a new word. When the two words are put together, the meaning of the new word has to contain elements of both.

a Find examples in the text.

b Give three other examples of your own.

Project 1

task

You are going to produce a set of recommendations about protecting human rights and values worldwide. Work in pairs or groups.

Producing a set of recommendations

Stage 1 Assessing the current situation

- a Discuss the state of human rights in the world. The photographs on this page will give you some ideas. You may also use other resources, such as newspapers, magazine clippings, etc.
- b Make notes under these headings:

Current problems	Proposals and solutions
-----	-----
-----	-----
-----	-----
-----	-----

Stage 2 Reading and discussing

- a Read this letter which someone has written to an English newspaper. Which of these humanitarian issues does the writer complain about?
 - ▮ War
 - ▮ Starvation
 - ▮ Unfair imprisonment
 - ▮ Free speech
 - ▮ Medical aid
 - ▮ Natural disasters

Dear Sir / Madam,

I think we all need to do more to protect human rights throughout the world. The abuses suffered by people, especially in conflict-ridden areas, are disgraceful. The international community can no longer stand by and watch as human rights are neglected and people starve.

Whilst I believe that war and conflict claim many lives I am most concerned about less dramatic problems, which are often less obvious and less sensationalised in the news. Currently, there are many people throughout the world who have no access to clean water, no housing and intermittent food supplies. If everyone in developed countries were to donate a small amount of their earnings to charitable causes then the world would be a much fairer place. Not only this, but the world would be a safer place, as less people would be driven to extreme actions by their dire circumstances. We need a public campaign to raise awareness of the plight of the world's poorest people and to increase charitable actions.

Many thanks
Waleed

- b What reasons are there for increasing awareness of humanitarian issues?

Stage 3 Agreeing on recommendations

- a List five ways in which human rights could be protected and maintained.
- b Discuss ideas that might help with this improvement.
- c Write a recommendation for each of the five aspects.

Stage 4 Presenting recommendations

- a Pairs or groups take turns to present their recommendations to the rest of the class. Be ready to explain how your ideas would affect people in Kuwait.
- b Now have a class vote on the best set of recommendations.

Read

Factfile

- Every year 5 million hectares of land worldwide become desert.
- Since the 1950s, 9 million hectares of land in China have turned into desert.
- Desertification affects 74% of the land of North America.
- In Africa, 73% of the drylands are affected by desertification.
- Dust from African deserts can reach cities in the Middle East and even Europe.
- 5000 years ago, the Sahara Desert was covered with grass and other plants.

- 3 Now read the article. What are the causes of the problem described in the article?

The Spread of the Desert

Desertification, which is the process in which productive land changes into desert, is an increasingly serious problem in over a hundred countries worldwide. One billion people, out of a total world population of six billion, endure its effects.

- Desertification usually occurs in dry areas where there is no rain and where the climate is harsh. In these places, the top layer of soil is destroyed so that the land can no longer be used for growing crops or grazing animals. This means that people who depend on the land for food have to move to 'greener' areas in order to survive. A proportion of the population may survive by moving, but others may die because of shortages of food and water.
- Although natural changes in the climate often precipitate the process, the activities of human beings are often the real cause of desertification. Because there are growing numbers of people to feed, farmers tend to overcultivate their land, with the result that the soil becomes poor and unproductive. Other farmers overgraze their land and this permanently kills off grass and other plants. In addition to the effects of farming, deforestation – the cutting down of trees – also erodes the soil. Trees are usually cut down to make more agricultural land, but once there are no longer trees and plants on an area of land, there is nothing to stop the wind and rain from blowing or washing away the top layer of soil. The dust which this produces can travel long distances and affect the health of people living in cities thousands of kilometres away.
- However, this is not the end of the story: desertification can also create conditions which produce strong winds and treacherous wildfires and this leads to even greater pressure on the Earth's most precious resource, water.

Check your understanding

- 4 Choose the correct endings to the following sentence beginnings.

- a Land can no longer be used for growing crops if ...
 1 the top layer of soil is destroyed.
 2 animals are grazed on the land.
 3 people move to greener areas.
- b The Earth's most precious resource is ...
 1 productive land.
 2 water.
 3 people.
- c Trees and plants ...
 1 grow well in deserts.
 2 stop wind and rain from damaging land.
 3 are a major cause of desertification.

Vocabulary Climate

1 Complete this text with appropriate words from the list below.

arid climate day-to-day droughts equator forecasting frigid humid planting prevailing

How is climate different from weather?

Weather is what happens to the air and atmosphere outside on a (1) basis, whilst (2) is the (3) weather in a particular place over a longer period of time. Countries near the (4) have (5), tropical climates, while lands close to the desert, such as Kuwait, have hot and dry climates.

In countries nearer to the (6) polar regions than Kuwait, the climate is cooler and colder. This does not mean that countries that are normally cold and wet cannot have hot, (7) weather. Some even suffer from (8) which are periods of very low rainfall. Information about climate is useful for weather (9), which can help farmers know the best time for (10) crops.

2 Discuss these questions in pairs or groups.

- a Describe Kuwait's climate. What do you think is the perfect climate?
- b What factors affect the world's climate?

Prefixes: mis-, re- and under-

3 Match the three prefixes a–c below with these meanings:

again not enough wrongly or badly

a re-

- 1 I spilt tea on my homework, so I had to rewrite it.
- 2 During the storm three houses were destroyed and had to be rebuilt.

b mis-

- 1 I misheard you. I thought you said we'd meet at 9 o'clock.
- 2 The children were very good. None of them misbehaved in any way.

c under-

- 1 Parents do everything they can to help children who underachieve.
- 2 I didn't realise at the time, but I was undercharged. The price tag said 200 KWD and I paid only 100 KWD.

Note

A prefix is a word or group of letters which is added to the beginning of a word and changes its meaning. Example: overcultivate – to cultivate too much or more than you should (over- means too much).

Words to remember

arid, atmosphere, equator, flooding, forecasting, frigid, humid, misbehave, planting, prevailing, reclaim

task

Writing A replyRead

You are going to write a reply to an e-mail about water shortage, suggesting ways of consuming less water.

Read this e-mail from a leading expert on water shortages. Then, look at the incomplete spidergram below. Get into groups and complete the spidergram with your own ideas.

Dear ...

One of the most important issues of the twenty-first century is the scarcity of fresh water. A paucity of water presents major hurdles to human development. Aside from fulfilling our need to drink, fresh water also plays an intrinsic role in agricultural production.

Water preservation is a major global challenge. Greater development and a perpetually increasing population has led to unprecedented demands on all of our resources, which has in turn led to an increased water shortage. This has prompted Kuwait into spearheading the development of the first desalination plants in the Middle East, as well as implementing several studies by the Kuwait Institute of Scientific Research into improving efficiency in the use of water for agriculture.

Ultimately, we need to curtail the unwarranted consumption of water if we are to prevail over the challenges facing Kuwait today. Do you have any suggestions about how the average Kuwaiti can contribute to cutting back on water? Please let me know your ideas.

Many thanks
Dr Abdulhameed

Planning and writing

Using your spidergram, write a reply to the above e-mail, suggesting ways in which Kuwaitis can consume less water in their day-to-day lives. Make the e-mail around 200-220 words and include two or three suggestions.

Reading A report based on statistics

Interpret and discuss

1 Look at this bar chart. What does it tell you? Discuss your ideas with a partner and write down three key facts illustrated in the chart.

In 2005–2006, a total of 4.5 million tonnes of household waste was recycled.

Read and analyse

2 Read this report based on the chart in exercise 1. Then answer the following questions.

- Does it contain any of the key facts you wrote down?
- One key fact in the report is incorrect. Can you find it?

Waste and recycling 2000–2006

Introduction

This report examines the trends in recycling between 2000 and 2006. It looks at the amounts recycled of five different kinds of waste.

Key facts

- During the year 2005–2006, 4.5 million tonnes of household waste was recycled.
- This is more than twice the amount of waste recycled in the year 2000–2001.
- Five different types of waste were measured: paper and card, glass, green waste, metal and other materials.
- In the first year of the survey, more paper and card was recycled than any other material, but by 2005–2006, green waste was the largest constituent with about 30 per cent of the total.
- In 2005–2006, the second largest component was metal, 28 per cent, then glass, 20 per cent.
- There was also an upsurge in the amount of other materials recycled.

Conclusion

The figures show that, for the duration of the period 2000–2006, there was a constant increase in the quantity of waste which was recycled. This waste came from two main sources: collections from people's homes, and collection points.

Recommendations

Whilst the increase in waste being recycled is heartening, it also reveals just how much work there is left to do. Not only do we need to get more things recycled but, perhaps more importantly, we should try to create less waste to begin with.

Writing A report

You are going to write a report based on waste and recycling statistics.

1 Read the report again and discuss these questions with a partner.

- What do you notice about many of the verbs in this report?
- Why does the writer use bullets [•] in the Key facts part of the report?
- Which information in the Conclusion is not illustrated in the chart?

Planning and writing

2 Look at the bar chart below.

- What does the chart tell you? Discuss your ideas with your partner and write down four or five key facts.
- How do the five countries compare with each other? For example, which country recycles the most material? Which country buries most waste in landfill sites?
- What conclusions can you draw from this chart? (You can include ideas of your own that are not given in the chart.)

3 Write your report in about 200 words. Use the headings: Introduction, Key facts, Conclusions and Recommendations, and expressions from the Useful Language box below. Keep your language simple and your sentences short. Use bullets [•] to separate points.

Check

4 When you have finished writing, read your report carefully.

- Check spelling, grammar and punctuation.
- Exchange reports with a partner. As you read what your partner has written, ask yourself these questions:
 - Has he / she included all the most important key facts? (Refer back to the chart.)
 - Are the conclusions sensible and correct?
- Return your partner's report and exchange thoughts and ideas.

Words to remember

- component, compost, constant, constituent, duration, heartening, household waste, incineration, material, quantity, trend, upsurge

| a extinction | ----- | 1 sleep during the winter |
| b habitat | ----- | 2 the process of ceasing to exist |
| c hibernate | ----- | 3 easily frightened / timid |
| d sanctuary | ----- | 4 safe place where animals are protected |
| e reticent | ----- | 5 natural living area or environment of an animal |

3 Read the article about giant pandas. How many of your answers to questions 1a-g were correct?

The Bamboo Bear

- A Although it is one of the best-known, best-loved and most fascinating wild mammals in the world, the panda is also one of the most reticent, and lives a solitary life. Pandas were originally found in several parts of Asia, including Vietnam and Tibet, but now survive only in certain parts of China.
- 5 B Pandas spend about 12 hours every day feeding and the remaining time sleeping or resting. The average weight of a panda is 120 kg. Pandas usually live in cold, damp conditions but are protected by their thick, warm, black and white fur. A typical panda is one metre and a half tall. Unlike some members of the bear family, pandas do not hibernate.
- 10 C Despite their size and weight, pandas are very good at climbing. If they are being threatened by their natural enemies, such as brown bears or leopards, they climb up the nearest tree for refuge. Their acute hearing also helps them to avoid their enemies.
- D Pandas mainly eat the leaves, stems, shoots and roots of bamboo plants. An adult can consume as much as 20kg a day. They also eat fruit, other plants, eggs and sometimes fish.
- 15 E There are only about 1600 pandas left in the wild. Until the 1960s pandas were being hunted for their skins, so humans posed the biggest threat to their survival. Now their main problem is the disappearance of their habitat, which is caused by the increasing use of land for farming and building. Anyone who is caught hunting pandas is severely punished. The Chinese authorities have also set up special permanent reservations which are expansive enough for 500-600 animals.

Check your understanding

Vocabulary Environmental words

- 1 Read the text. Then, using a dictionary or the glossary at the end of this book, give definitions for these words from the text.

Are you aware of the importance of plants? In addition to providing nourishment, plants enrich the soil, protect it from erosion and produce the oxygen we need to breathe. They are also of immense value because they provide us with medicines, oils, perfumes, waxes, fibres, timbers and fuel.

- 5 The Prophet Mohammed (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) says that any Muslim who plants or cultivates vegetation and eats from it, or allows another man, animal or bird to eat from it, will receive recompense from Allah. He (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) also said that anyone who plants a tree under which people can seek shade or shelter from the sun will have his reward with Allah.

Speaking Role play

Introduction The situation

1 Read this situation. Who should decide where to build the new homes?

- ▶ The population of your region is growing rapidly and in a few years there will be a serious dearth of housing.
- ▶ There is an area very near your town where new homes could be built, but this area is a wetland and is protected – it is the habitat of a rare type of bird.
- ▶ There are two other possible areas:
 - 1 5 kilometres away from the town.
 - 2 20 kilometres away from the town. A new town and new roads would have to be built here.

Preparing for the role play

2 Your class has the job of deciding where the new homes should be built, but first you are going to discuss the problem in groups of three.

- a Each student should play one of the roles A–C described below.
- b Read your role card and decide where you think the new homes should be built. Make notes about your choice of area.

Role A – Environmentalist

- ▶ You believe in preserving animal habitats.
- ▶ You believe that too much new building will damage the countryside.
- ▶ Your brother's family want to move to the area.

Role B – University student

- ▶ You are soon going to graduate from university and will need a home in this area.
- ▶ Your family live in the town and you would like to live near them.
- ▶ You don't think birds are very important.

Role C – Town resident

- ▶ Your family have lived in the town all their lives.
- ▶ You think your town already has enough inhabitants.
- ▶ Animal conservation is not a priority for you.

Role play

3 Work in groups of three – A, B, C.

- a First, each 'character' should say where he / she thinks the new homes should be built. Give as many reasons as you can.
- b When everyone has expressed their opinions, have a general discussion. Try to persuade the others in your group that you are right.
- c Organise a vote. What is your group's conclusion?
- d Compare your vote to the vote of the other groups in the class.

task

You are going to write a report to the council making recommendations about where to build houses.

Writing A formal report

- 1 This is a report by a group of local businesses who are in favour of the new houses being built on the wetlands near the town.

Read the report and fill in the text with suitable titles for the headings.

Organisation of small businesses and the council housing project

1 _____

The purpose of this report is to comment on the projected housing development for the local area, with respect to the business community in particular.

2 _____

We recognise the needs of the burgeoning population and so, by consensus, are convinced of the need to utilise undeveloped wetlands for construction purposes.

As a result:

- building here will increase demand for services, which the members of our organisation provide.
- any windfall from them will have a knock-on effect on the town and will help to improve the local economy.

3 _____

Equally, we are concerned that building the new houses out of town may represent a missed opportunity for this town to expand and modernise. Out-of-town housing will:

- require new shops and so increase competition for local businesses.
- direct investment away from our town at a time of economic recession.

4 _____

This group vociferously supports the building of new houses on local wetlands. Whilst we are aware of environmental concerns, the town's economic vitality must precede environmental issues.

- 2 Now plan a report to the town council from your group.

- Decide what your section headings will be.
- Take into account the views of your classmates in the speaking exercises and the ideas put forward in the report above.
- Make recommendations to the council about where to build the houses.
- Use the Useful Language box below.

The Arfaj

Have you heard of the Arfaj? Have you ever seen one? The Arfaj, scientific name Rhanterium Epapposum Oliv, is the national plant of Kuwait. The selection of the national flower was not at random, the choice being the result of a long process, which took into account the historical roots, symbolism and the fame of the flower. The Arfaj was chosen as the Kuwaiti national flower because of its historic significance to Kuwaitis. Traditionally, the Arfaj was used as a natural medicine, as a source of bedding and firewood, and as a food source for sheep. In the past, the Arfaj was recorded as covering up to thirty percent of Kuwait's land, a phenomenal figure for a single species. French botanist Renato Desfontaines recorded the Arfaj in his encyclopaedia "Flora Atlantica." In this work he noted that, whilst rare in many countries, the Arfaj seemed abundant in Kuwait. He was especially taken with the plant's bright orange flowers and beautiful fragrance.

Unfortunately, the Arfaj is one of 370 species of plants that are facing potential extinction because of human activity and environmental degradation. Many people have commented on the dwindling number of Arfaj in Kuwait. Dr Jose Kaitharath, an Indian botanist, notes that when he pointed out the Arfaj to students very few of them knew what it was, or even that it was the national flower of Kuwait. He puts this down to the fact that the Arfaj is no longer visible in many areas.

Unfortunately, because of human development, many important species are disappearing from Kuwait. The Arfaj, as the country's national flower, may be one of the better known examples, but it is by no means the only casualty. However, with commitment, determination and hard work many groups are attempting to save these species, by protecting them for generations to come. Indeed, Kuwait's natural heritage is worthy of protection. Dr Kaitharath makes this clear when he says, "The plants unique to Kuwait are strong in nature as they have to brave the harsh weather conditions. But once damaged by human activities, it could take years and years to resurrect it, and that's only if their seeds are still available in the soil ... the 370 plant species in Kuwait cannot be found in other places in the Middle East."

In protecting these rare plants, we are not only protecting a valuable part of nature; we are protecting a part of Kuwait itself.

Rhetorical questions

1 The article begins with two questions. What is the purpose of the two questions? Is the author expecting answers?

2 Explain what a speaker means when he/she says:

a 'How much longer must people endure this injustice?'

b 'How many times do I have to tell you to stop walking into the house with mud on your shoes?'

task

As part of a campaign for a local botanical park, which aims at both attracting visitors and making people more environmentally aware, you are going to design and write a leaflet for teenagers.

Writing a Leaflet on Environmental Issues

Stage 1 Read and discuss

- a Read the leaflet below about Kew Gardens.
- 1 Which environmental issue is the subject of the leaflet?
 - 2 Which group of people is the leaflet trying to persuade?
 - 3 What ideas are the writers using to persuade these people?
- b What has the writer done to make the message of the leaflet clear to readers?
- c What do you think about the design and layout of the leaflet? Here are some things to think about:
- ▶ The headlines / slogans
 - ▶ The amount of text
 - ▶ The use of separate boxes
 - ▶ The use of illustrations
 - ▶ The use of quotations

What is Kew Gardens?

Kew Gardens is a 300-acre park in West London dedicated to educating the public about plants from all over the world. It combines stunning gardens with giant greenhouses that allow the continuing existence of many species of plants that would otherwise be unable to survive in England. Kew Gardens combines beautiful, relaxing surroundings with a commitment to education and scientific endeavour.

Millennium Seed Bank

Kew Gardens is not only a place to see rare plant life. In partnership with its sister site, Wakehurst Place, Kew Gardens has created the world's largest seed bank, aiming to catalogue, protect and bank 75,000 plant species by 2020. This is one of the most important conservation projects in the world, allowing us to better understand the floral life around us and, ultimately, to protect bio-diversity for future generations.

Kew Gardens Around the World

The scientific knowledge developed at Kew Gardens has already helped countless people around the world. By helping survey plant life in Cameroon, Kew was instrumental in the creation of the Bakossi National Park. The expertise Kew has helped to develop in propagation and germination also helped to reintroduce plant life and restore environments in Australia, Madagascar, the UK and South Africa, along with many other countries. Kew Gardens also holds some of the most impressive botanical reference materials in the world. Every year thousands of researchers from all over the world come to Kew Gardens to use the famous Herbarium and Library.

A visit to Kew Gardens is not simply a trip to one of the most impressive gardens in the world. It is also a life-changing experience through which you can become part of the commitment to protect the diverse life of planet Earth.

On July 3rd, 2003, Kew Gardens was officially made a World Heritage Site, and therefore acknowledged as a site of important cultural and scientific value. As Kew Garden's director, Professor Peter Crane, said, the title "recognises the importance of Kew's uninterrupted contributions to botanical and environmental science since 1759, together with its unique collection of plants from all over the world, and its international influence on the history of landscape and garden design."

Stage 2 Discuss

Discuss these questions with your partner/s. Write notes about main points of agreement.

- a What is the importance of preserving our natural plant life for future generations?
- b What roles do plants play in our lives? Here are some ideas.
 - ▶ Plants and trees absorb carbon dioxide. Every time a tree is chopped down, more carbon dioxide remains in the air, contributing to global warming.
 - ▶ Photosynthesis is the most important chemical process in the world. Through this, plants and trees convert carbon dioxide to oxygen.
 - ▶ Plants and trees provide habitat for the millions of creatures that we share the Earth with.

- c Why is it important to make people aware of these facts? What role do botanical gardens play in raising awareness?
- d How could you get involved? Here are some ideas:
 - ▶ Volunteer at local gardens
 - ▶ Fundraise for the gardens
 - ▶ Become a member

Stage 3 Make your decisions

Decide the following points:

- ▶ The issue your leaflet will highlight, and how this affects people of your age in Kuwait and around the world.
- ▶ Suggestions for action people can take.
- ▶ Ideas which you can use to persuade young people that they should do something.

Stage 4 Write your leaflet

- a Share the tasks. For example, one student could work on an interesting design, find illustrations, etc.; another could think of suitable headlines or slogans; a third could write the text.
- b Each student in the group shows or tells the rest of the group what he / she has done. The group as a whole can comment on this and suggest improvements.
- c Each student revises his / her ideas and produces a final version of the leaflet.

Stage 5 Present your leaflet

- a Groups take turns to present their leaflets to the rest of the class. (Leaflets can be displayed on the classroom walls.)
- b Talk about how effective each leaflet is. How persuasive is it?

HENRY V

William Shakespeare

Episode One

King Henry V was one of the great rulers of England. In his youth he had been famous for his ill-mannered and wild behaviour and that raised concerns about whether he was fit to inherit the throne. He had indeed been known to spend much of his time with uneducated people, immersing himself in futile activities. Once he became king, however, Henry's character changed dramatically and the royal qualities he possessed shone through. He was righteous, merciful and remarkably intelligent. Yet his greatest power did not lie in his physical strength but rather in his use of language. He was a very eloquent speaker and mastered the art of rhetoric.

In the royal court, many praised the king's knowledge and wisdom and expressed their amazement at his remarkable transformation. Nevertheless, the Earl of Canterbury, one of the King's advisors, started having some concerns. He knew that Henry was a just and righteous man. At the time, the aristocracy enjoyed considerable wealth, and the Earl was thus worried that the new ruler might pass a bill that would reduce their possessions. Consequently, he devised a plan to divert Henry's attention from the matter by claiming that since King Henry was a descendant of a French Queen, he was the rightful heir to the throne of France which he ought to claim as his own.

Henry was reluctant at first, but eventually he became convinced of the legitimacy of his claim. He thus sent word to the French informing them of his intentions. In response, a group of French ambassadors soon arrived at the English court, bearing the English King a note from the Dauphin, the eldest son of the King of France. The Dauphin communicated in his message his absolute rejection of King Henry's prerogative and expressed his belief that Henry's wild youth was interfering with the soundness of his judgement. As such, he had no right to rule France and should stop his attempts at asserting his authority over the country. Along with this message, the Dauphin sent Henry tennis balls as a reminder to the King of his mischievous youth.

King Henry was greatly offended by such a present as he fully understood its significance and the Dauphin's intentions. Therefore, he used this insult as a pretext to wage war on France. In the message he sent back with the ambassadors, Henry warned the French that they had brought war upon themselves and that they would suffer the consequences for generations to come:

“Tell the Dauphin I will keep my state,
Be like a king and show my sail of greatness
When I do rouse me in my throne of France.
Tell you the Dauphin I am coming on,
To venge me as I may and to put forth
My rightful hand in a well-hallowed cause.
So get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin
His jest will savour but of shallow wit,
When thousands weep more than did laugh at it.”

The decision to go to war was hence taken: England was to invade France. Thus, the preparations began. Both armies started to round up their troops and the race to arms was soon well underway. The two countries were equally motivated, as this war was to determine their fate. For both sides, losing the battle would entail the loss of the whole country.

As in all conflicts, the parties involved attempted to devise certain strategies to guarantee their victory. One of the strategies that the French resorted to was to bribe certain English courtiers to kill the English king and thus avoid the whole war. Three of the king's courtiers, The Earl of Cambridge, Lord Scroop and Sir Grey, agreed to betray him and conspired to murder him. In the company of the king, they tried to hide their true intentions by complimenting him and praising his great power and just ruling of England. What they did not know was that King Henry was fully aware of their treachery and that he had not been deceived by their lies.

When he discovered the plot against his life, the King's disappointment was great. The three men had been his close friends and yet they were willing to kill him in exchange for money. He had believed they were noble, educated and loyal, but they were actually traitors. They were therefore arrested and charged with high treason. Since their disloyalty had endangered the king himself and the whole kingdom, they were sentenced to death. Thus, the French plan to get rid of the English king failed and preparations for the war were resumed.

Episode Two

The English set out to France where the battle was to take place. This war was crucial for them as they felt it was a matter of honour and a duty to defend their offended king and recover what they believed to be England's legitimate territory.

On the French front, arrangements were also being made in preparation for the English invasion. The French were aware that their opponents were extremely powerful, yet they were keen on defending their country in every way they could. Thus, they gathered all the brave men who were willing to sacrifice their lives for their homeland and vowed to unite in their fight against the English.

Unlike everyone else at the French court, the Dauphin was quite confident that the French would be victorious. He did not think too highly of King Henry. Instead, he believed that there was no reason to fear the English. Sooner or later, he thought, the English king would make some error in judgement that would cost him the battle.

The King of France, on the other hand, did not share his son's opinions; he was well aware of the real threat his kingdom was facing. Knowing that the English were a force to be reckoned with, he was convinced of the necessity of being well armed in order to stand against them.

This was not the first time that the two countries had gone to war. As the French king well knew, King Henry was the descendant of a great line of kings who had conquered France several times in history. On each occasion, the French had been left helpless, watching their country being conquered by the dreadful enemy. He remembered vividly all the devastation brought about by the previous

English rulers upon the French nation; and there was now this fear that the same might happen again:

“Think we King Harry strong;
And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet him.
The kindred of him hath been fleshed upon us;
And he is bred out of that bloody strain
That haunted us in our familiar paths:
This is a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him.”

In the meantime, King Henry had decided to grant the French one final chance to surrender the throne peacefully. Not wanting to resort to war immediately, he was willing to reason with them. He threatened, however, that if his demands were not met, a great misfortune would befall the kingdom of France and warned the French that they would then have no one to blame but themselves.

As soon as the news reached France, the Dauphin hurried to reject King Henry's demands and instructed his ambassadors to communicate his message to King Henry at once. Without consulting his father, he was determined to go into battle as he believed the English king to be too weak and incompetent to win. But most of all, the Dauphin was underestimating the consequences of the war upon his own country and people.

Nevertheless, the wiser, more knowledgeable King of France chose not to respond to Henry's demands immediately. Instead, he requested some time in order to consider the full situation and assess the power of his own army against that of the enemy. He thus sent a messenger with the promise to communicate his final decision by the next day.

The French king was then faced with a very difficult choice. If he were to agree to King Henry's conditions, he would lose his throne and all the great achievements of his lifetime would amount to nothing. On the other hand, if war were to break out, the consequences would be too horrific for his country to bear. His whole kingdom was at stake, but so too was the welfare of his people and the existence of his homeland as an independent nation.

The final decision was critical. Peace, or war, depended entirely upon the choice of the French king. Giving up the throne to the English King, and hence sacrificing his position of power and authority, would allow him to protect and preserve his people and country; whereas his refusal to comply would jeopardise the safety and life of his subjects and expose them to the hazards of war.

One night and one decision were to decide the fate of both France and England. As evening fell, all lay anxiously awaiting dawn. The next morning was to bring about the moment of truth that would determine the course of events in the days to come.

Episode Three

On the morning of the next day, the decision was revealed: France had declined England's proposition. Instead, the King of France offered his daughter, Katherine, to Henry in marriage, along with some insignificant dukedoms as dowry. As tempting as having Katherine for a wife seemed to him, King Henry was not entirely satisfied with the dowry. He thus considered the proposal demeaning and interpreted this as a declaration of war. Rather than surrendering the throne, the King of France was willing to endanger the lives of his people and the security of his country.

The English decided to launch their first attack on the city of Harfleur as it was one of the closest French cities to the North. Before going to battle, King Henry addressed his soldiers in a very eloquent way, adapting his speech to the different members of his army in a manner appropriate to their social class and background. First, he urged them all to be strong and to do their utmost on the battlefield. Then, addressing the noblemen, he encouraged them to follow the example of their noble ancestors who were remembered for their valour and bravery. As for the members of the lower classes, such as the farmers and craftsmen, Henry addressed them in a straightforward way, using images drawn from their everyday language. He praised their boldness and urged them to show the French their true essence. He thus concluded:

On, on, you noblest English.
Whose blood is set from fathers of war-proof!
Fathers that, like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from morn till even fought.
And you, good yeoman,
Whose limbs were made in England, show us here
The mettle of your pasture; let us swear
That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt not.
The game’s afoot:
Follow your spirit, and upon this charge.”

Through his persuasive skills and mastery of language, Henry had succeeded in making all his soldiers feel important and involved in his cause. As English warriors, they were loyal and fearless, determined to fight side by side for the victory of England.

Thus the battle began. The English were fierce and relentless in their attempt to conquer Harfleur. They persisted in their attack and did not give up. Eventually, they managed to besiege the city. King Henry showed mercy towards the citizens of Harfleur as he gave them one last chance to surrender without putting up a fight, in order to limit the damage in the aftermath of the battle. Otherwise, he warned them, their city would be burned down to the ground. The choice once again lay in the hands of the French.

In the meantime, the governor of Harfleur was expecting reinforcements from the Dauphin of France and, as such, was reluctant to surrender. However, since the Dauphin failed to provide assistance, the governor eventually yielded in order to spare his citizens further hardship. Thus, the English took over the city. True to their word, they treated the inhabitants with respect and compassion. No individual was harmed and all properties were kept intact.

The news of the English victory came as a great shock to the French court. The sheer power and skilfulness displayed by Henry’s army on the field had exceeded everyone’s expectations. Through their extreme dedication to their cause, the English had proved to be unstoppable, fearless and invincible; they were indeed a dreadful enemy.

The threat was now very real and the French feared that the English would soon occupy their whole kingdom. Far from giving up, however, the French king worked hard to uplift the morale of his princes and soldiers. It was necessary for them to recover their self-confidence in order to be able to stand in the face of the advancing English, as they could not afford to give in to despair. Any sign of weakness now would prove fatal, as their enemy would be quick to seize the opportunity and take control.

There remained one hope that the French firmly held on to. The English were no longer as strong as when they had first started the war; they had been weakened by hunger and exhaustion. Seeing that the English were highly disadvantaged at this point, the Constable of France still believed that the French troops would eventually triumph. He felt that it was only a matter of time before King Henry would become aware of the failing force of his army. Upon such a realisation, he expected him to surrender himself to the French and announce his defeat.

The King of France endorsed the Constable's reasoning and asserted his own belief in the ultimate victory of the French army. There was thus no room for resignation; the battle would go on till the end.

Episode Four

In the meantime, the English were still pushing through the north of France. Captain Fluellen, one of the captains in charge of King Henry's army, brought him reports of the ongoing battle. The English were making good progress and forcing the French troops to withdraw gradually. In spite of the French attempts to hold their enemy back, the English invasion continued steadily.

On the English front, there had been no reports of deaths except for a soldier who had been executed for stealing and committing offences against French civilians. King Henry gave strict orders to ensure that his troops treated the local residents decently and with utmost care. Any disobedience would be punished by death. On the other hand, the French were suffering great casualties and a large number of their troops had been already killed during the fight.

In the heat of the battle, a French messenger arrived at the English campsite bearing a letter from the King of France. The latter was contesting the English victory at Harfleur and challenging King Henry's ability to score further achievements on French soil. The note expressed the determination of the French to defeat the English and send them back to their homeland humiliated and dishonoured.

In response to this provocation, King Henry answered with a challenge of his own. He requested the French messenger to inform his king that it was only a matter of time before he would be forced to capitulate and surrender his kingdom to the English. Although his soldiers were starving, exhausted and significantly fewer in number than the French, King Henry had absolute faith in their courage and strength. He was convinced that despite their poor condition, they would fight till the end and come out victorious.

At the French court, an atmosphere of restlessness and anxiety prevailed. Everyone was getting ready for the important battle to come. Princes, dukes, lords, officers and soldiers were all arming themselves to face the English in the hope of defeating them. The ultimate confrontation would take place at the break of dawn.

While awaiting the critical hour, the French Dauphin, the Constable of France and the Dukes of Orleans and Rambures were discussing their armour and horses. They were in desperate need of a pastime to keep them busy till morning came. It was clear that the tension was building up as the men began quarrelling. Once the Dauphin left, the others expressed their scepticism about his eagerness to fight the English. The Constable believed him to be a hypocrite who pretended he was brave and valiant whilst, in reality, he was merely a coward.

The conversation then moved to the English. The French found it foolish of them to advance at night in an unknown territory where they would be endangering themselves. The Duke of Rambures, however, disagreed with the rest as he considered the English to be exceptionally audacious. The sun set while the French were getting armed in preparation for the attack, confident in their forthcoming victory.

Episode Five

At the English campsite, King Henry was beginning to feel anxious. He was fully aware of the danger his soldiers were exposed to. Now, more than ever before, he felt the necessity to keep them motivated. Therefore, he decided to disguise himself, by putting on a cloak belonging to one of his officers, and mingle with his troops to find out what state they were in. As he was walking amongst his men, he took the time to stop and talk to some of them. Since nobody seemed to recognise him, he took the liberty to ask for their opinion about their king.

The first man he addressed was a camp follower called Pistol. He sold goods and provided various services for the army. Pistol communicated his great fondness for the king but expressed his dislike of Captain Fluellen as the latter was extremely righteous and allowed no transgressions even in times of war. King Henry, on the other hand, greatly admired this captain who had invaluable opinions about the laws of war and the need to enforce them. He considered him an outstanding member of his army who had always been distinguished by his valour and the respect he inspired.

After his encounter with Pistol, King Henry carried on until he met three soldiers.

The first person who spoke was John Bates, who expressed his wish to be back in London instead of being trapped in a battlefield. He also communicated his belief that the King himself probably had the same wish. Still in disguise and not wanting to reveal his true identity, King Henry was quick to reply. He firmly asserted that he was certain the king wished to be nowhere other than where he currently was: on the battlefield in France. Bates claimed in response that the king should be the only one to be trapped in France, as it would save a lot of innocent people's lives. In return, King Henry defended his decisions as King, arguing that when honour is at stake everything should be risked to protect it.

Michael Williams spoke next. He agreed that the king's cause must be good; otherwise he would have to be held accountable for the consequences of the war and the suffering of his people, and bear these upon his conscience. However, Williams admitted that, as loyal subjects, the soldiers were not in a position to disobey the orders of the king for they would be acting as traitors.

King Henry answered by refuting the argument that holds the king responsible for the fate of his army. He argued that it was the duty of the soldiers to come to war well prepared and aware of the possibility of never returning home. As the conversation proceeded, Henry drew their attention to the human nature of kings. A king has feelings like all other men, claimed Henry, and sometimes experiences fear and anxiety. Nevertheless, while every man can freely express his emotions, a king cannot reveal his worries to his subjects for fear of disheartening them. And there lies the difference between the king and the common man:

“Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own.”

Eventually, through his mastery of language, King Henry was thus able to justify his position and convince the three men of the validity of his argument.

Following this interesting exchange, Henry wandered off alone. In a rare moment of weakness, he could not help but reflect upon his status as king. He then experienced a moment of severe anxiety as he felt the full weight of his responsibility. It became obvious to him that kings could not enjoy themselves like common men. Another matter that also struck him at that point was the fact that he was respected out of fear rather than love. Most of the sweet words addressed to him were not genuine but instead were fake attempts at flattery. Most importantly, he believed that despite having all the luxuries in the world, a king cannot sleep soundly since he would be constantly concerned about the security of his kingdom and his subjects.

King Henry hoped that his soldiers would have the strength and courage to be able to face the French, although they were weak, famished and outnumbered. Subsequently, he returned to his camp to ensure that the preparations for the upcoming battle were going according to plan.

On the other side, the French were still getting ready for the battle. More than ever before, they were almost certain that they would defeat the English and prevent them from conquering their kingdom. Knowing that their enemies were fighting in extremely difficult conditions gave them great hope of overpowering them at the greatest confrontation yet; the battle of Agincourt.

Episode Six

The long awaited dawn finally broke and both sides headed to the theatre of war. The odds were all on the French side: they outnumbered their opponents by five to one and, unlike the English, they were all geared up and energetic. King Henry, however, was quite satisfied with the number of English soldiers who were out on the battlefield. They were there of their own will, keen on defending the honour of their king and country.

Before setting out to the battleground, the English king addressed his warriors with the purpose of uplifting their spirits and preparing them for this critical battle. King Henry declared that from that day on, celebrations would be held each year to mark the commemoration of this battle. The narrative of these events would be passed on from generation to generation, thus all those who would perish during the fight would be eternally immortalised and honoured for their valour. King Henry addressed all his soldiers as brothers, pointing out how privileged they were to fight side by side for the victory of their country:

“He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
 Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours.
 Old men forget: yet all shall be forgot,
 But he'll remember with advantages
 What feats he did that day...
 This story shall the good man teach his son;
 And this day shall never go by,
 From this day to the ending of the world,
 But we in it shall be remembered;
 We few, we happy few, we band of brothers;
 For he today that sheds his blood with me
 Shall be my brother.”

Moved by the eloquence of their king and motivated by his persuasive powers, the English warriors were thus invigorated and regained their confidence in their ability to defeat the French, despite the unfavourable odds. Though they were physically worn-out, the English possessed a boldness of character that would enable them to fight till the end in the hope of achieving victory.

The encounter was fierce. The two armies were fighting violently, resolutely and relentlessly. Everything depended on that one battle since the victors would take control of the kingdom of France.

As the battle raged, the English dominated the field. The French were gradually losing ground and soon began lamenting their bad fortune. They now regretted the gross miscalculation they had committed when they underestimated the power and dexterity of the English and the ingenuity of their king. They were suffering major losses due to their oversight. Nevertheless, they were willing to die honourably on the field rather than running away like cowards and leading a shameful life.

During the confrontation, the English lost two of their boldest fighters, the Earl of Suffolk and the Earl of York, who died after demonstrating a great deal of courage.

Despite the fatalities on both sides, the battle continued until, overcome with immense loss, the French were unable to carry on. They stood hesitant on a hill, confused and indecisive. They knew that the English had won but refused to admit their defeat.

This behaviour infuriated King Henry. Hence, he sent them a messenger advising the French to take action and decide either to surrender or to fight. Otherwise, he warned that he would attack again, and this time he would show no mercy towards the captured prisoners.

A French messenger was soon sent to ask King Henry for a favour. The French wished to gather the bodies of their dead from the field in order to bury them properly. The messenger also carried the message that the French had decided to surrender to the King of England. The war was over.

An assessment of the French casualties revealed that they had incurred major losses since many high-ranking officers and noblemen figured among their dead: princes, barons, lords, and knights. In fact, both the Dauphin and the Constable of France had been killed during the battle. The English, on the other hand, had lost relatively few warriors. Most of those who had died on the English side were common men and mercenaries. It was thus a triumph for the English, who had won the war with minimal losses. King Henry attributed their extraordinary victory to the determination of his troops. He professed that it was only thanks to their help that he had achieved success.

Before heading back to England, King Henry met with the King of France. The encounter was arranged to draw up an agreement which would secure peace between the two countries. Being the winner of the war, the English king put forward his demands which the French king was expected to comply with.

After a somewhat short deliberation, the French king agreed to grant him all his demands, including his daughter's hand in marriage.

Both parties took an oath never to fight each other again, and instead agreed to become allies. They all hoped that the marriage of the English king and the French princess would ensure a permanent bond between the two kingdoms. Thus, everyone joined hands in preparation for the wedding of King Henry and Katherine, symbolising the union of England and France.

Grammar File

Unit 1 Linking the past with the present

Present perfect simple and continuous

We use verbs in the present perfect simple and continuous forms

- 1 to link actions or events which started in the past with the present:
They have broken the law – they should be punished.
(The law was broken in the past – we are thinking about a future punishment now.)
He's been studying law for three years.
(He started studying three years ago and is still studying now.)
- 2 with for or since to refer to periods of time:
I've lived here for three years / since 2006.
They've been studying at university for five years / since 2004.

Present perfect simple

We use the present perfect simple to talk about

- 1 the fact that something happened in the past:
I've swum in the Dead Sea.
- 2 a past experience or achievement with a definite result in the present:
I've broken my leg – which means I can't go skiing this year.
I've passed my driving test, so I can borrow his car next week.

Present perfect continuous

We use the present perfect continuous to talk about

- 1 an activity which continues over a length of time:
I've been reading a book about the history of law-making.
- 2 to stress the length of time an activity has taken:
She's been training to be a doctor for six years.
- 3 an activity which may not be completed:
Nawal has been writing her economics essay all morning.
(She probably hasn't finished writing it yet.)
- 4 an activity which is repeated over a period of time:
The police have been interviewing people all week.
We've been playing tennis this week.

Comparative and contrastive connectors (whereas, but, on the other hand, instead of, in comparison with)

Comparing

Farming is less profitable than it used to be.
The city is much busier than the countryside.

Contrasting

There are several words and expressions we can use to contrast ideas:

- 1 Whereas (this joins two clauses):
I prefer living in the town, whereas my brother prefers the country.
Whereas some people enjoy the outdoor life, others spend all their time indoors.*
- 2 But (this joins two clauses):
My brother prefers living in the country but I prefer the town.
- 3 On the other hand (this can't be used to join clauses):
Travelling by car is very cheap. On the other hand, flying is much quicker.
- 4 Instead of:
Instead of flying, let's go by car.*
Could I have tea instead of coffee, please?
- 5 In comparison with:
In comparison with flying, driving is quite slow and dangerous.*

Unit 2 Talking about past events

Past perfect simple

We use the past perfect simple to

- 1 clarify which of two past actions happened first:
Irish people emigrated because so many had died of starvation.

(People died and as a result others emigrated.)

By 1854, a quarter of the population of Ireland had emigrated to America.

(They emigrated before 1854.)

- 2 talk about a situation, state, feeling or action in the past:

Hussein felt nervous because he had never flown before.

(Hussein was nervous at some point in the past. The reason he was nervous was that he had not flown before this point in time.)

When I read the letter I couldn't stop smiling. I'd passed all my exams.

Note: The past perfect continuous is the subject of Unit 10 Grammar reference.

Unit 3 Adverbs of Manner

We use adverbs to tell how an action is or should be performed. For example:

The little girl ran quickly. In this sentence quickly modifies the verb ran (to run).

- 1 Often these adverbs are formed by adding -ly to the end of an adjective, but sometimes other spelling changes are needed.

Adjectives ending -l add -ly ; careful-carefully.

Adjectives ending -y change to -ily ; lucky-luckily

Adjectives ending -ble change to -bly ; responsible-responsibly

- 2 We cannot form adverbs from adjectives that end in -ly.

- 3 Some adverbs have the same form as adjectives, for example fast.

- 4 We do not use adverbs after link verbs, you use adjectives, for example, we do not say Sue felt happily. We say Sue felt happy.

- 5 Adverbials of manner are sometimes prepositional phrases or noun groups, for example, He did it the right way.

If Conditional- Type zero, one, two and three

Conditional Sentences are also known as Conditional Clauses or If Clauses. A conditional sentence consists of two clauses, an if clause and a main clause. It is used to express that the action in the main clause (without if) can only take place if a certain condition (in the clause with if) is fulfilled. If the if clause comes first, a comma is usually used. If the if clause comes second, there is no need for a comma:

- 1 The zero type of Conditional Sentences

The zero conditional is a structure used for talking about general truths – things which always happen under certain conditions.

Form: if + Simple Present, Simple Present

Example: If you heat water to 100 degrees, it boils.

- 2 The Type 1 Conditional Sentence

What is said if the condition is possible and also very likely that the condition will be fulfilled.

This condition refers either to present or to future time.

Form: if + Simple Present, will – Future

Example: If I find her address, I'll send her an invitation.

- 3 The Type 2 Conditional Sentence

The second conditional is a structure used to talk about

1 something that is improbable and unlikely to happen in the future.

2 something that is impossible.

Form: if + past simple + would + base form

Examples: If I were in charge, I'd raise salaries.

- 4 The Type 3 Conditional Sentence.

The third conditional is a structure used to talk about imagined past situations.

Form: if + past perfect + would + have + past participle

Example: If I had passed my driving test, I'd have my own car.

I wouldn't have read that book, if you hadn't recommended it to me.

Unit 4 Subordinate clauses of purpose and result (in order to, because, to + infinitive..., to be the cause of, so that, with the result that, to lead to...)

We use the following words and phrases to introduce explanations:

- 1 in order to + infinitive:

Some people move to greener areas in order to survive.

- 2 because + clause:

We need to produce more food because there are more people to feed.

Because there are more people to feed, we need to produce more food.*

3 to + infinitive:

Trees are cut down to make more agricultural land.

We use the following words and phrases to link actions with results (causes and effects):

1 so that + clause:

The soil is destroyed so that the land cannot be used for growing crops.

2 to be the cause of:

The activities of human beings are often the real cause of desertification.

3 with the result that + clause:

Farmers tend to overcultivate their land, with the result that the soil becomes unproductive.

4 to lead to:

Wildfires can lead to greater pressure on the earth's most precious resource: Water.

Unit 5 Talking about wishes

Wish + past perfect

We use wish + past perfect verbs to express

1 regrets about something which happened in the past:

I wish I hadn't spent all my money. (I spent all my money.)

2 regrets about something which did not happen in the past:

I wish I had saved some money. (I didn't save any money.)

Wish + past simple

We use wish + past simple verbs to talk about dissatisfactions with the present, and impossible conditions:

I wish I had my glasses with me. (I don't have my glasses with me.)

I wish I were ten years younger. (This is an impossibility.)

I wish I could read more quickly. (I read slowly and would like to read more quickly.)

Wish + would

We use wish + would to make complaints about other people's behaviour:

I wish you wouldn't do that.

(The speaker is telling someone to stop doing something.)

I wish my brother would get up earlier.

Unit 6 Explaining possibilities

We use modal verbs must, can't and might to explain possible truths.

1 We use must + infinitive or must have + past participle to talk about things we are almost sure are true:

He must earn quite a lot of money to be able to afford that car.

They must have come from somewhere hot like Africa.

2 We use can't + infinitive or can't have + past participle to talk about things we are almost sure are not true:

It can't be easy designing and building bridges – they're complicated structures.

They can't have finished their lunch already – they only started eating five minutes ago.

3 We use might + infinitive or might have + past participle when we are unsure whether something is true or not:

She might be French – she has a strange accent.

He's not usually this late – he might have got stuck in heavy traffic.

Talking about processes

The passive (1)

We often use passive verbs to describe processes.

A Form

1 To form the passive, we use the verb to be in whatever tense we need, then add the past participle:

Pandas are protected by their thick warm coats.

If pandas are being threatened by enemies, they climb up the nearest tree.

2 Sometimes a passive sentence mentions the person who does the action (the agent), but sometimes it does not:

If pandas are being threatened by enemies, they climb up the nearest tree.

(If the agent is mentioned, it is preceded by the word by.)

If pandas are being threatened, they climb up the nearest tree.

B Use

1 The main reason for using passive verbs is to focus attention on the object rather than the subject of a sentence:

Until the 1960s pandas were hunted for their skins. (In this passive sentence we consider the pandas to be more important than the hunters.)

Until the 1960s people hunted pandas for their skins. (In this active sentence the attention is on the 'people who hunted'.)

- 2 We may also use passive rather than active verbs to make a sentence sound more formal or impersonal:

Pandas were originally found in several parts of Asia.

- 3 Passive sentences do not always say who did the action (the agent). We don't need to mention the agent if

- ▶ we don't know who the agent is:

My car has been stolen. (by an unknown thief)

- ▶ it is obvious who the agent is:

Anyone who is caught hunting is severely punished. (Judges and the law punish people who have done something wrong.)

- ▶ it is not important who the agent is:

Panda sanctuaries have been set up in China.

Note: The passive form of modal verbs is the subject of Unit 11 Grammar reference.

Prepositions (for, in, from, of, on, with)

Most English prepositions have several different functions.

At the same time, different prepositions can have very similar uses:

on Monday / in the morning / at night

Many nouns, verbs and adjectives are normally used with particular prepositions:

The reason for... / to arrive at... / to be angry with somebody... / on a bus...
